

Blue Sky Making Well

A big thank you to week one participants - walkers, talkers, makers and sponsors.

Pace - walks for well-being - is well underway with the sun shining outside on our #walksbydesign and inside on our artist designer exhibitions and maker workshops.

We've caught the roving eye of both local and national Edinburgh Festival press: you might like to review our own news column for a flavour of what's going on.

This week we focus on income generation for emerging designers and communities with a panel discussion on Tuesday evening all about Creative Hubs and we choose this event to announce the 2015 Gayfield New Design Graduate collaboration.

This week also sees the re-emergence of our Design Library in conjunction with British Council colleagues from the Maker Library Network. School bells are ringing again all over Scotland and every day seems to be a school day for all of us here at Gayfield Creative Spaces.

Best wishes from the Summer 2015 Team.
